Dentons publishes Global Litigation and Dispute Resolution Q&A Guide

18 August 2017 – Dentons has published its first-ever Global Litigation and Dispute Resolution Q&A Guide, which offers the current view on dispute resolution in 27 jurisdictions across the globe.

The guide – although not intended to serve as exhaustive advice on dispute resolution in the jurisdictions covered – provides answers concerning main dispute resolution methods, court litigation, fees and funding, court proceedings, interim remedies, final remedies, evidence, cross-border litigation, and alternative dispute resolution in jurisdictions across Australia, Europe, the Americas and Asia.

Dentons' Litigation and Dispute Resolution professionals have experience dealing with all types of disputes, ranging from banking litigation, corporate disputes, judicial reviews, and international arbitration to class actions, white collar crime and internal investigations, infringement of intellectual property, and EU competition and anti-trust law.

The Firm's Litigation and Dispute Resolution lawyers draw upon their extensive experience, trusted judgment and insight to develop customized strategies that address their clients' specific business objectives. The team employs the most appropriate tools and strategies for each stage of the process and each unique situation, working with clients to assess and manage their risks in relation to the legal costs of the dispute and to minimize the likelihood of future litigation.
