Why did we do it?

The growth

Bigger business in Russia More important globally

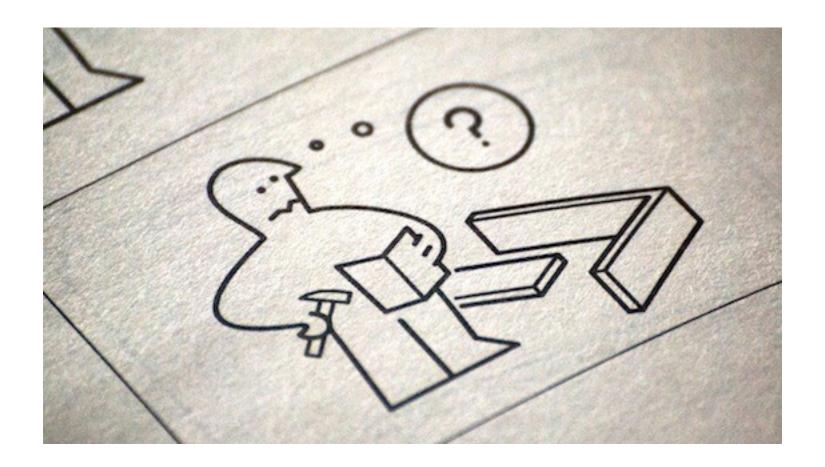

More people needed More complex issues to tackle

The internal resources were insufficient

The external resources couldn't do the target

Unpredictable

High onboarding costs

Different approaches across IKEA stores

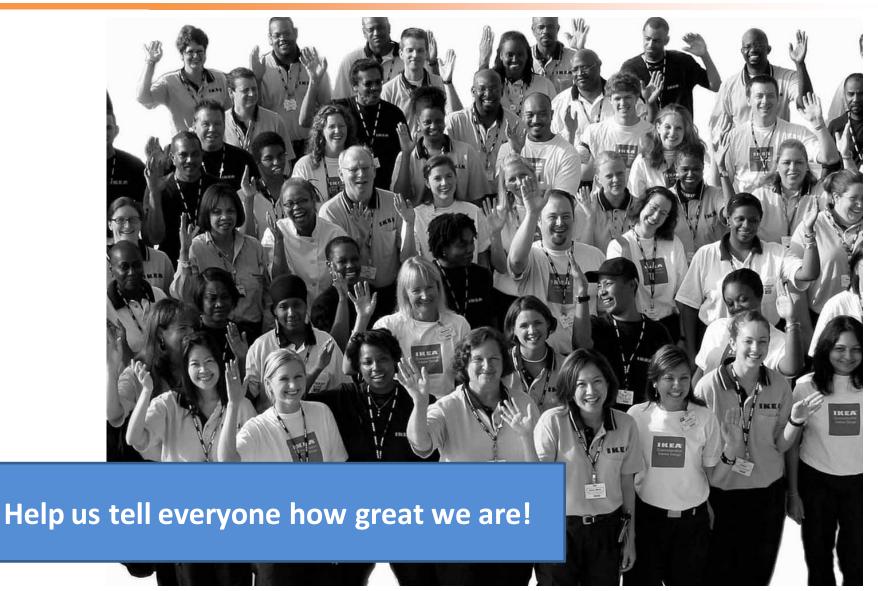

It ain' getting better!

So we came to FutureToday and said....

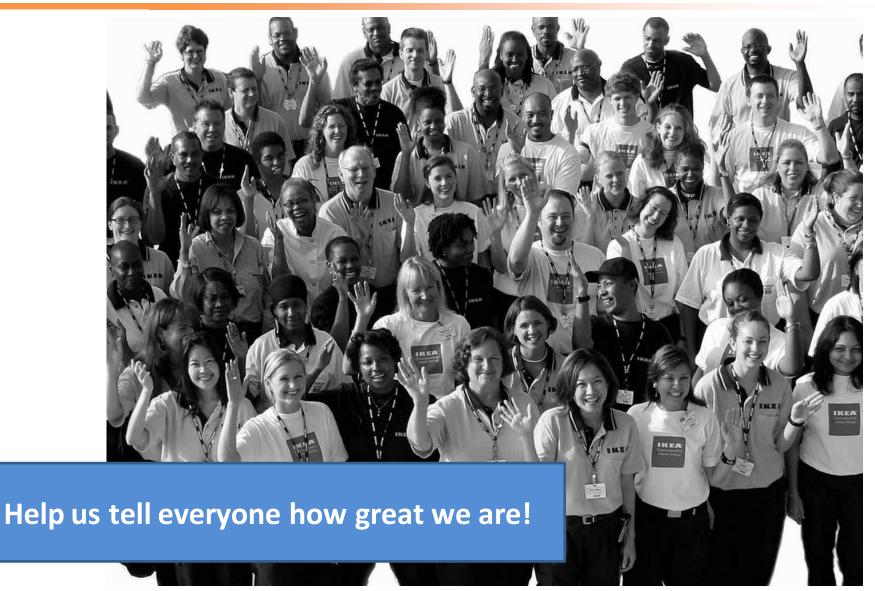

When someone calls – we come to help!

IKEA came up with a request

We came back with lots of questions

As always, there came two news

There were no ready answers

IKEA made this project an instrument of change and learning

The new project goals came to life

Purpose:

 During FY 13-15 build and establish a base for succession to secure future expansion needs

Goals:

- Run several trainee programs with the first one starting to attract and select during Autumn 2012
- Select candidates with a diverse background mirroring our customer base
- Develop the candidates into the core areas of the store that needs most urgent successors based upon the functional competence review
- Significantly increase the Recruitment competence in the whole retail organization and thereby: increase retention, decrease turnover and successor in place – as the main follow up measurements

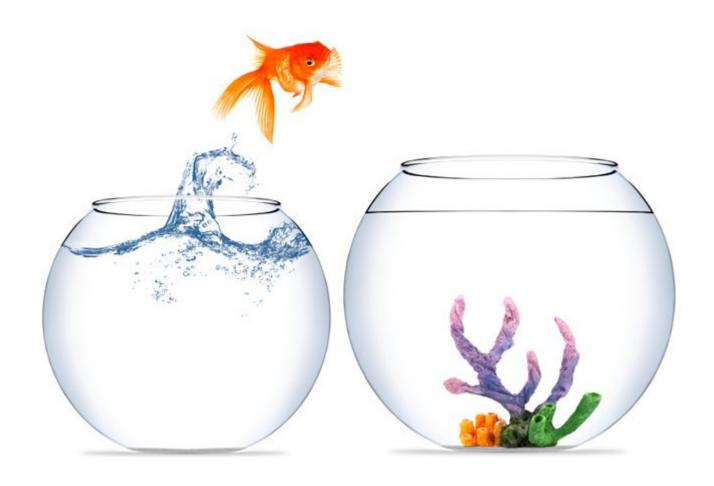

Target groups:

Graduates and Young leaders

Once you start changing something – be prepared for a lot of change

We changed talent acquisition process and that led to more issues...

What we found out: issues, challenges and things to change

>>> From unconscious to conscious...

Low profile of retail as an industry

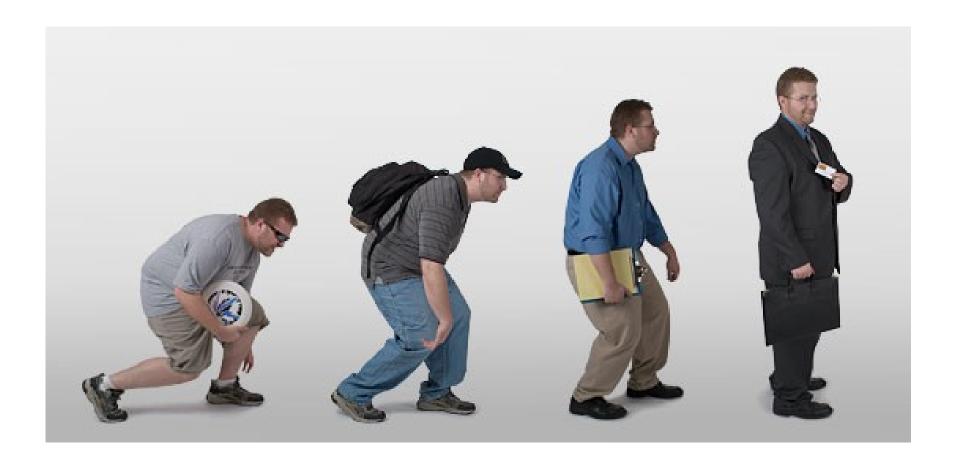

Selling IKEA way to hi potentials

Selling internship to an experienced professionals

Relating the importance of mobility

Balancing all the parts of the program

Short run vs. Long run

Old trainees vs. new trainees

Existing vs. new succession risk!

Experienced candidates vs. graduates

Internal candidates vs. external candidates

Selling the program and involving stores

Our main point – leadership program is a journey, not a destination
