Moscow office holds African natural resources seminar

Moscow, September 23, 2014 – Dentons' Russian Energy and Natural Resources practice, together with colleagues from the UK and France, conducted a seminar for Russian clients dedicated to legal issues concerning African natural resources (including oil and gas). Following a high level overview of typical features of African regulatory and contractual regimes, the seminar provided a detailed analysis of compliance and local content requirements, some potential due diligence issues and how to best structure investments.

The speakers were Moscow partners Mathieu Fabre-Magnan and Doran Doeh, London partners Danielle Beggs and Martin Kitchen, and Paris partners Ramin Hariri and Vincent Lacombe. The seminar attracted representatives of major Russian and international companies and banks diversifying their international interests and looking to focus on Africa.
