The Association of European Businesses (AEB) is concerned about the potential negative consequences of new US sanctions

The Association of European Businesses, the main representative body of foreign investors in Russia, is extremely concerned over the potential negative consequences in course of the implementation of new US sanctions against a number of Russian physical and judicial persons.

The Association of European Businesses has informed the leadership of the European Union about its concern originating from the U.S. sanction policy that can make the EU businesses a victim to US legal actions for doing business in and with Russia.

The AEB welcomes actions from the EU as well as from its individual member states aiming at minimizing the effect of this policy.

The Association calls upon all parties to stop further escalation of tensions and to dramatically reduce the negative impact of politics on the international business environment.
