Dzhangar Dzhaltchinov and Kirill Roubalsky ranked among the best tax litigators by Tax Controversy Leaders 2015

Moscow, September 15, 2015 – Dzhangar Dzhaltchinov, Partner and head of Dentons' Russian Tax and Customs practice, and Kirill Roubalsky, Associate, have been ranked among the leaders in tax dispute resolution in Russia by the International Tax Review.

Dzhalchinov primarily focuses on tax litigation. Between 2007-2014 he handled over 700 court cases including many before the Supreme Arbitration Court, and advised on a number of tax disputes settled at pre-trial stages. Dzhalchinov also advises on a broad spectrum of tax-related issues including drafting internal policies to prevent tax risks, analyzing contracts for tax risks, and verifying tax accounting in order to reveal potential tax assessments and overpayments.

Roubalsky focuses on tax litigation, general corporate and international tax law and has extensive experience advising on transfer pricing issues. He has wide-ranging experience advising major Russian and international companies on a broad range of tax law issues, including taxation of RF non-residents, application of VAT deductions in the construction industry, tax aspects of real estate and securities transactions, as well as M&A transactions. His experience also includes successfully representing clients in complex tax disputes and assisting with desk and field tax audits.

The 2015 list of Russian tax controversy leaders comprises 32 experts from consulting and law firms. The Tax Controversy Leaders rating is based on outstanding achievements in the previous year, and recommendations from clients and colleagues. The full list can be found on the International Tax Review website.

Dentons' Russian Tax and Customs practice is recognized as one of Russia's finest by legal publications such as Chambers and Partners, The Legal 500, Tax Directors Handbook and World Tax. The team advises clients on a broad spectrum of matters relating to tax and customs law.
