"The fact that the Arctic agenda has been chosen as the main topic for the VII Northern Dimension Forum reflects increasing worldwide interest in the region. The Arctic today is already a significant region for the global economy. It is an important resource for rare metal production and experts predict this will become a major region of investment for Europe in the future.

Sustainable Arctic development is a complex issue that requires a sensitive and considered approach, involving the development public private partnerships, collaboration with partners and technological support. Today the Northern Dimension participants are in a position to start discussing the future of Arctic development and facilitating growth in the region”.

Tapio Kuula, Member of the Board, Fortum Corporation; Co-Chairman of the Northern Dimension Business Council (NDBC);

“The Arctic is an issue where a long-term perspective is needed. Decisions made today will have long-lasting consequences for generations to come. In the Arctic, the environment, logistics and infrastructure contain both challenges but also opportunities. A general lack of infrastructure on both sea and land is perhaps the largest barrier to development in the Arctic. Successful cooperation in this area requires commitment of all the actors - countries, regions and business representatives”.

Evgeny Ambrosov, First Deputy General Director, Member of the Board, PJSC Sovcomflot:

“For the seventh time the Northern Dimension Forum is playing its role as a platform for dialogue between Russia and the EU countries, Iceland and Norway on cooperation in the Arctic region. This proves once again that our countries are genuinely interested in working together to maintain stability in the region, despite the economic and geopolitical complexities involved.

The development of the North and, above all, the Arctic is becoming more important than ever, as this region has serious economic potential, which will only be discovered in this century. This close collaboration between the countries of the Arctic region should of course be aimed at preserving the unique and extremely fragile Arctic ecosystem, and the implementation of development programmes should contribute to strengthening the cultural potential, identity and traditions of indigenous peoples.

I believe that the extensive experience of cooperation gained under the Northern Dimension project should be further utilised in the new and promising international organisation — the Arctic Economic Council”.

Philippe Pegorier, Chairman of the AEB Board:

“Today, the Arctic is one of the most promising areas for international cooperation. Business is interested in infrastructure projects and mining operations in the Arctic. But no country is able to meet these challenges alone, so close cooperation among the EU countries, Norway, Iceland and Russia is playing a vital role.

I am glad that the Northern Dimension Forum continues to be one of the few platforms for dialogue between the countries, where the parties are able to communicate in an honest, open and constructive way. The business community does not want to be involved in the geopolitical crises and international sanctions, but rather wants to successfully implement projects for the further development and prosperity of our economies”.
