

Equity capital markets: past performance and future prospects

2nd of April 2009

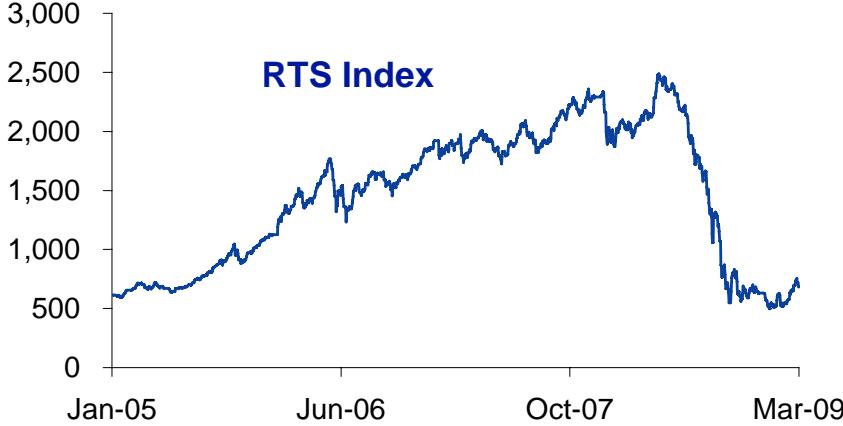

Past performance of Russian equity capital markets

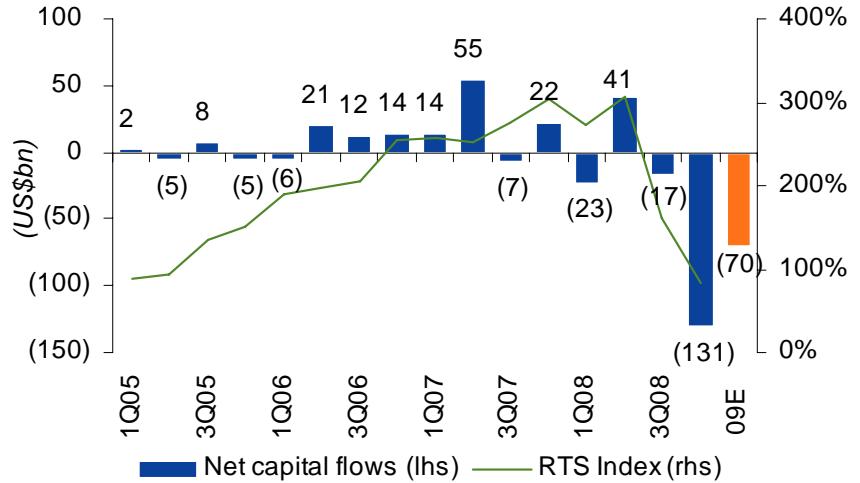

Commodity prices...

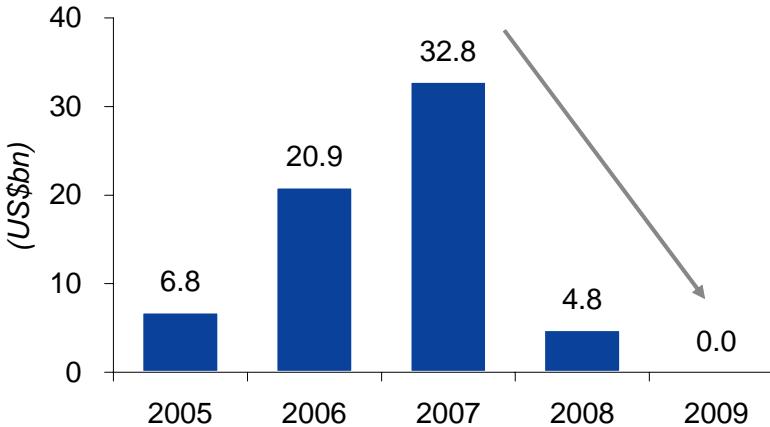

...have been driving Russian ECM performance...

...capital inflow and outflow...

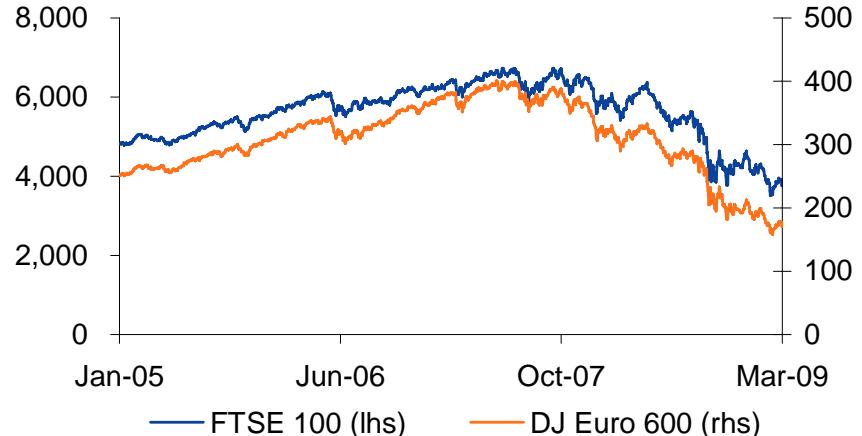

...and ECM transactions dynamics

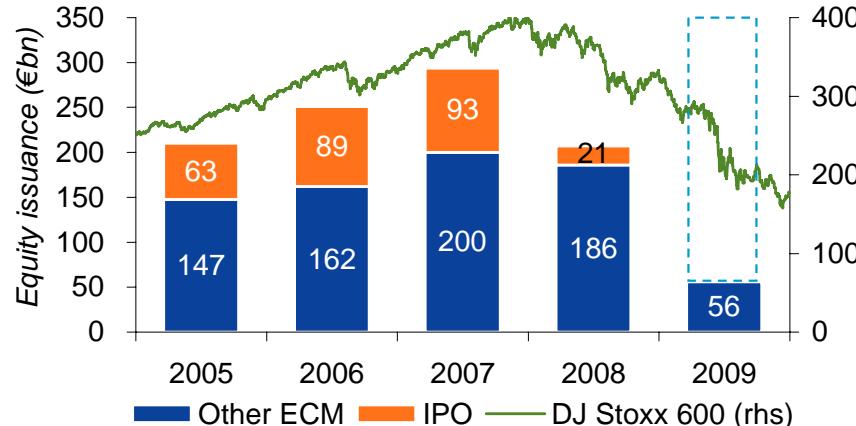

Past performance of European equity capital markets

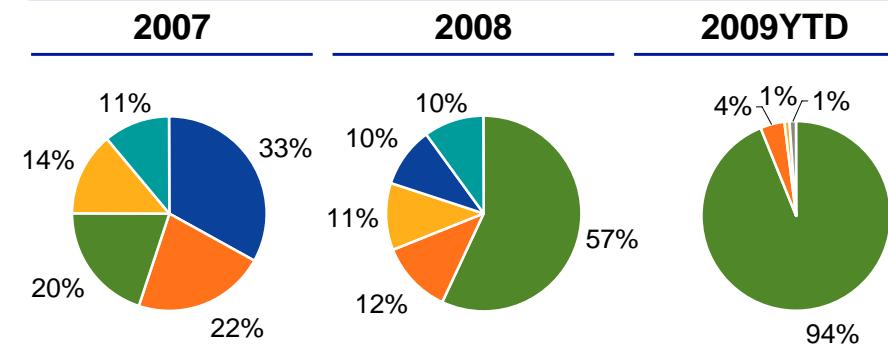

Although European markets declined substantially during the current downturn...

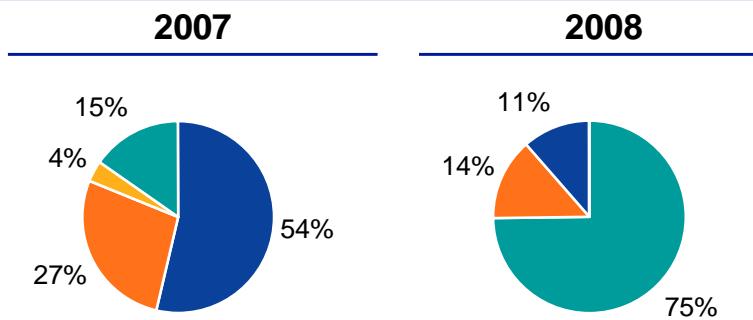

...equity issuance environment proved to be more resilient which underpins greater sophistication of European financial markets

Issuers continued to raise capital in ECM – predominantly in the form of rights issues...

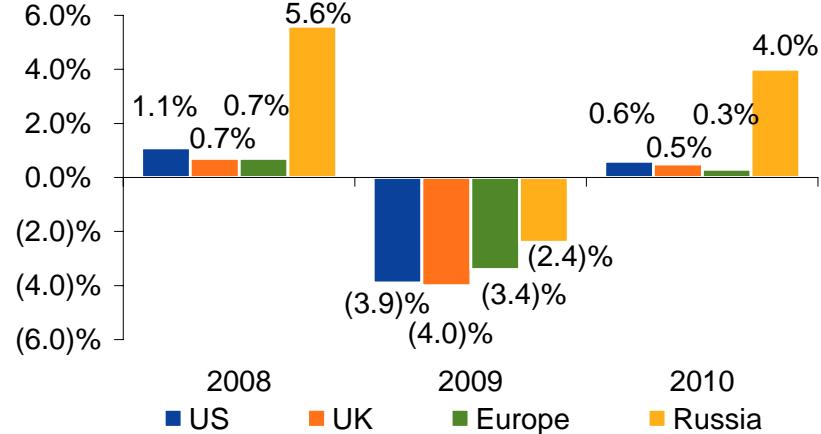

...whereas such instrument is not available in Russia (rights are not tradable under Russian law)

■ IPO ■ Block trade ■ Rights issue
■ Convertibles ■ Follow-on ■ Other

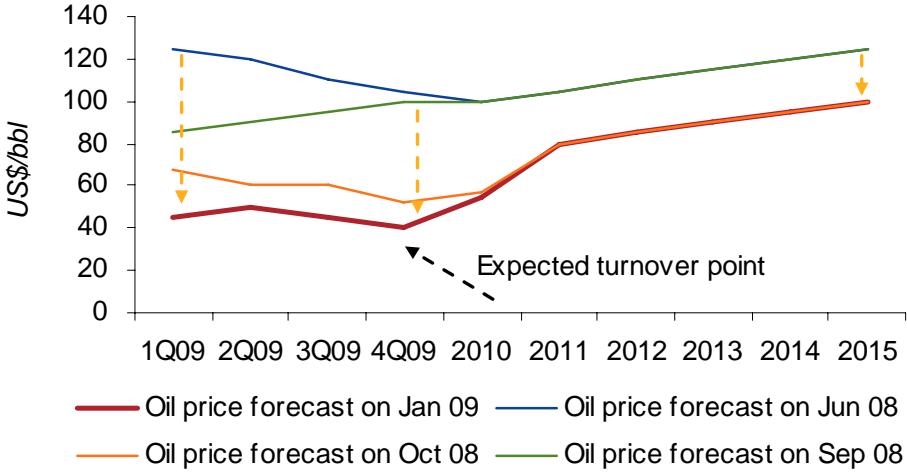

Future prospects of Russian equity capital markets

Deutsche Bank economists expect global recovery to start in 2010 in line with market consensus

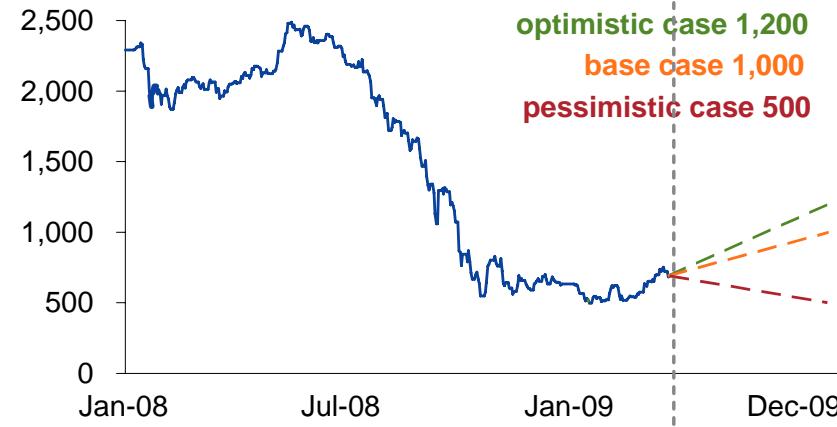

Source: Deutsche Bank research

... although consecutive downgrades of commodities suggest that expectations can change

Source: Deutsche Bank research

A base case scenario for RTS index from Deutsche Bank analyst currently stands at 1,000 bp...

Source: Bloomberg, Deutsche Bank research

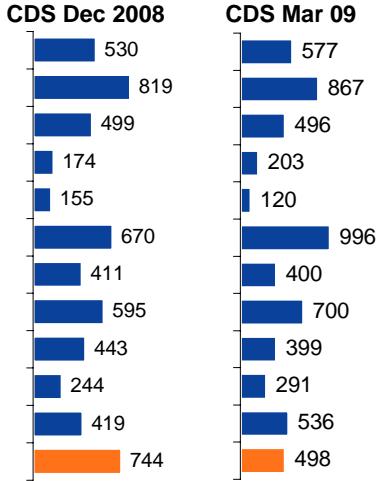

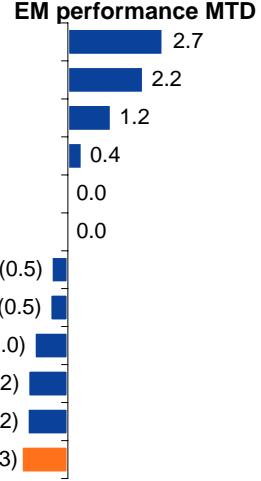

...and experience of past financial crises shows average decline of 56% and duration of 3.4 years from peak to trough

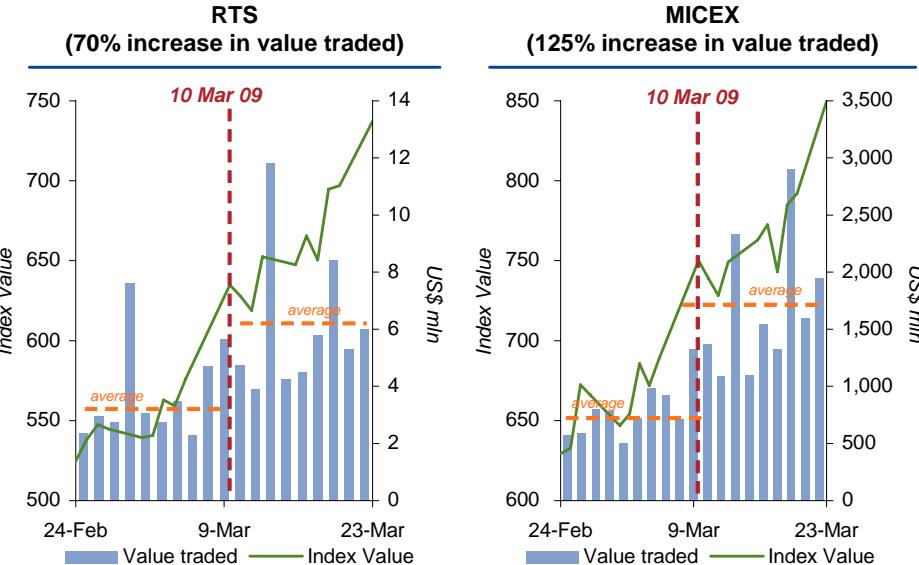

Source: American Economic Association, 03 January 2009

Future prospects of Russian equity capital markets (continued)

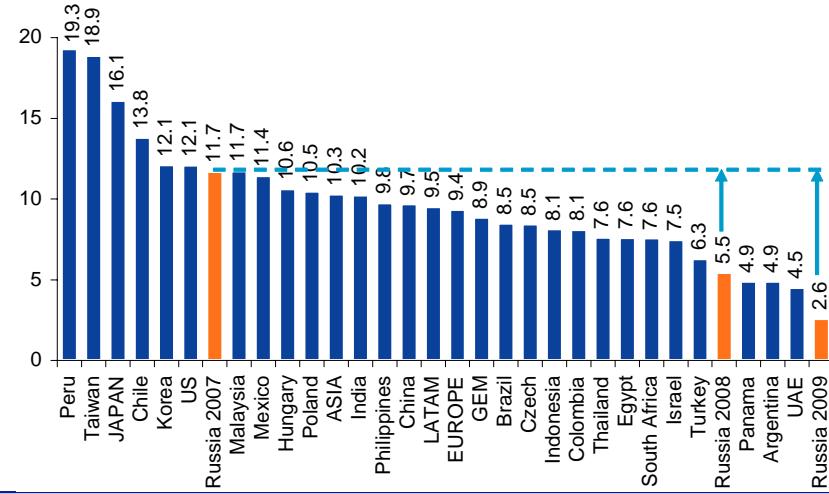

Although investor sentiment towards Russia decreased substantially ...

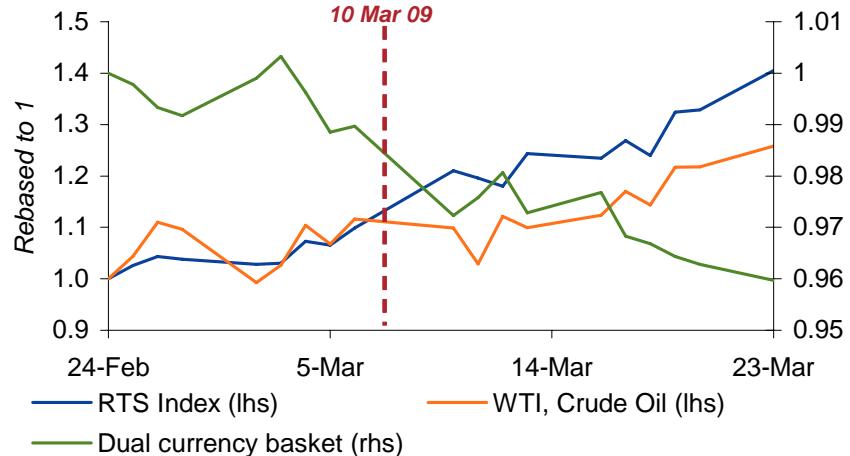

...which was proven by the March rally fuelled by significant inflows from foreign long-only investors...

...material and rapid recovery may take place on the back of Russia's significant undervaluation...

...the main drivers for this rally being rising price of crude oil and appreciating ruble

Source: Bloomberg, 24 March 2009

When will equity markets reopen?

